WHAT WERE CATTLE PADDOCKS NOW CRICKET PARKS

THE ROMANCE OF WAREHOUSE CRICKET

Fifty Years of Progress Crammed into a Decade

WHEN the history of Queensland cricket comes to be written, one of its brightest and most absorbing pages will unquestionably be that which chronicles the rise and development of the Warehouse Division of the Queensland Cricket Association. Founded in obscurity twelve years ago, the organisation has grown beyond all recognition until now it controls in the vicinity of 100 clubs, and plays the majority of its fixtures on two of the largest park areas in the metropolis—areas that have been transformed by the division from agistment paddocks into cricket grounds that are a delight to play upon. This progress has not been accomplished without strenuous administrative effort, but the men who have thus striven in the cause of cricket have built up for themselves a monument that will exist while ever the game is played in Queensland.

Why is Warehouse Cricket called Warehouse Cricket?

It's a long story that started on 8th August 1921, 100 years ago. Brisbane businessmen met, all representing Brisbane Warehouses (today we call them stores) to form a Warehouse Division under the Queensland Cricket Association Banner. Brisbane Hospitals, Finney & Isles, Rhoades, Howard Smith, Old Newspapers, McWirther's, Elliott Bros, Borthwick Meatworks, Bulimba Brewery, Elliot Bros, Tritton, Main Roads, Tristrams, Commonwealth Bank, to name only a few of them.

The concept of the competition was to offer cricket as sport to Warehouse employees as form of recreation and Saturday afternoon pastime. The competition was originally played on paddocks behind factories or stores across Brisbane and only warehouse employees could participate.

In 1921 a philanthropist by the name of George Marchant donated 10 hectares of land at Chermiside to the Brisbane City Council under the proviso that it could only be used for community purposes. Warehouse representatives discovered the park's potential in 1929 and WCD proposed the development of cricket fields to the council. The same proposal was made for Victoria Park and Tingalpa Park (known now as Kianawah Park). All parks were permanently leased by Warehouse and slowly and steadily developed into the grounds we know today. Victoria Park cricket fields made way to the Inner City Bypass in 1999, but as a trade-off, 7th Brigade Park was secured and developed for cricket.

Winter Cricket was introduced in 1933 and became an instant success and has grown in popularity over time, especially for Junior teams and Sunday competitions.

The Warehouse Cricket Division became the Warehouse Cricket Association, concrete and porphyry pitches made way for synthetic pitches. The Warehouse teams were replaced over time by club teams, although many teams still trace their origin back to the old concept of employee teams, i.e., Gold Crest commenced playing in 1923-24 as R.M. Gow and became Gold Crest in 1929-30. The Albany Creek Hawks did not join the association until 1999.

The brilliant concept of offering a cricket competition in a centralised multi-grounds location made the concept unique and more manageable.

The original 17 participating teams have expanded to over 400 teams this current Winter season. What would the founding members think of that success?
